The Rs. 60 IPO Trap: Cheap Stocks Lie to You

Inside: 3-Step Valuation Forensic Check

The Nominal Share Price Illusion

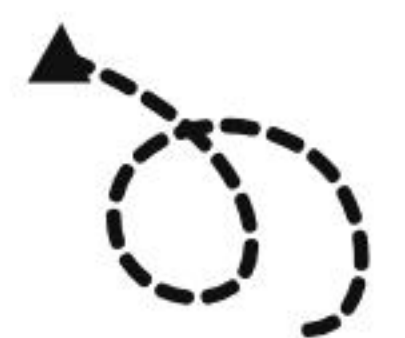

The Myth: Retail investors assume a Rs. 60 IPO is inherently cheaper and holds easier multibagger potential than high-priced stocks.

The Reality: Nominal price is purely aesthetic. A Rs. 60 stock trading at 60x P/E is far more expensive than a Rs. 2,000 blue-chip trading at 18x P/E.

Core Rule: Nominal price creates affordability bias. Market cap and P/E dictate true valuation.

3 Traps Hidden Behind Low-Priced IPOs

- 1. Dilution Concealment: High total share counts at low nominal prices mask aggressive promoter valuations and exit pricing from retail scrutiny.
- 2. Float & Liquidity Traps: Low ticket sizes attract retail frenzies, creating artificial day-one volume while institutional tier-1 participation is zero.
- 3. Aggressive P/E Multiples: Companies price shares at double-digit unit figures to appear accessible while pricing in years of unproven future growth.

Compare vs Listed Rivals

Promoters price per-share units to trigger retail demand.
Institutions buy enterprise cash flows and earnings power.

Takeaway: Audit market capitalization vs PAT before bidding on September 7, 2026.

3 Rules Before Bidding on Any IPO

- 1. Ignore Nominal Price: Evaluate every IPO strictly as a Total Enterprise Valuation, never as an individual unit bargain.
- 2. Benchmark Sector Multiples: If a micro-cap demands a richer P/E ratio than established sector leaders, reject the issue.
- 3. Verify Anchor Float: Check QIB subscription and institutional backing rather than relying on retail oversubscription numbers.
