

Why LIC's 9.99% ICICI Bank

Approval Is NOT a Buy Signal

Inside: The Institutional Accumulation Secret

The 'Big Buyer' Illusion

The Myth: Retail belief: 'LIC got approval for 9.99%, so they will aggressively buy shares tomorrow, triggering a massive rally.'

The Reality: Institutional reality: RBI approval is a procedural cap, not a purchase order. Buying happens silently via block deals or over months.

Core Rule: Headlines create noise. Order flow creates wealth.

3 Reasons Prices Won't Just 'Moon'

1. Regulatory Ceiling: The 9.99% is a maximum legal limit allowed by the RBI, not a mandatory target LIC must hit immediately.

2. Block Deal Preference: To avoid 'slippage' (driving the price up against themselves), institutions buy in bulk via off-market transfers.

3. VWAP Accumulation: Large funds use Volume Weighted Average Price strategies to buy slowly over months, neutralizing spot market spikes.

Headlines are for retail sentiment.

Ownership data is for professional execution.

Takeaway: Stop chasing news; start tracking actual ownership shifts.

3 Rules for Regulatory News

1. Ignore the 'Approval' Hype: An RBI approval is a permission slip, not a transaction. It changes nothing about the current price.
2. Wait for the Pattern: Only trust the verified quarterly shareholding pattern updates to confirm if the stake actually increased.
3. Analyze the Method: Distinguish between open-market buying (volatile) and off-market block deals (stable/institutional).
